To the Editors of the Intelligencer: I read in your paper of the 3d inst, his note to the Brooklyn Kogle, also in your preceding number the initial "covenant" to remit each other's sins and mutually or remit each other's sins and mutually to remit each other's sins and mutually to remit each other, signed by Beecher, flowen and Tilton, dated April 2, 1872, nourteen months ago, and first made public on Tuesday last by the custodian to whose honor the three had entrusted it. This custodian assigns as his reason for publishing it that Bowen had failed to keep the silence he-therein covenanted to keep, but still insisted and declared that the helneous and atrocious crimes that the helneous and the helneous and the helneous and the helneous are the first five months of the principles which the more assured feeling in the Londo keep, but still insisted and declared that he helneous and affectious crimes that the helneous and affectious crimes that foreign trade. We know that bankers Beecher had been charged with committing were true, and for the further reason that the public nasy understand the "brave" that the public nasy understand the "brave" that the document is given to the world to convict the "great preacher" has kept, and that the document is given to the world to convict the principal effender against a constant drain upon our specie truth, public decency and reputation, meaning, I presume, Bowen, one of its sooner or later have a disastrous ending, members and main pullars since its four mbers and main pillars since its foun- as it cannot possibly be otherwise.

The "great preacher," in his note to the Chicago as Viewed Through Danbury The "great preacher," in his note to the Chicago as Viewed Thro Rayle, says he "should not speak now but for the sake of rescuing another from unjust imputations," which means Tilton, of course, who together with his wife prior to 1873, were also members and pillars.

That the document was published by the Less than twenty month. "That the document was published by the useful an without the consent or authoritation of either himself or Tilton; and if the document should lead the public to regard Mr. Tilton as the author of the calcumine to which it alludes, it will do him great injustice." "I am unwilling," he says, "that he (Tilton) should even seem to the river, block upon block away, all was leave the first plant and the property of the river, block upon block away, all was leave the first plant and the remained. That was hardly twentyle rescribing for the injurious state." It cames the rips have assessed away, and o be responsible for the injurious state-
